

Boardman to Hemingway

This project involves connecting a new high-voltage transmission line to the regional power network at an existing electric substation. To safely and reliably make this connection, the facility's physical layout will be upgraded and expanded. The scope of work includes installing essential technical equipment, such as line protection relays, system metering devices, and specialized automated control systems, alongside integrating fiber-optic communications to support operations for the new transmission line.